

England 1966
World Cup Final medal sales

Roger Hunt – retained by player.

Geoff Hurst – sold his collection at Christie's South Kensington in September 2000 (including his 1966 shirt for £80,000 hammer), but kept his medal before selling it privately with other items from his collection for £150,000 to West Ham in 2001.

Bobby Charlton – retained by player.

Alan Ball – sold for £140,000 hammer, Christie's South Kensington, May 2005.

Martin Peters – sold privately in 2001 to West Ham United. On display in the club museum.

Nobby Stiles – sold to his former club, Man Utd, for £160,000 at Convery Auctions in October 2010 (a 1966 medal record).

Ray Wilson – sold for £70,000, Christie's South Kensington, March 2002. Then sold on November 10-11, 2014, at Graham Budd for £136,000, to Saracens RFC chairman Nigel Wray, for his sporting memorabilia museum (The Priory Collection)

Bobby Moore – sold as part of a £1m-plus private treaty sale of the player's collection to West Ham's club museum. Deal brokered by Christie's in July 2000.

Jackie Charlton – retained by player.

George Cohen – failed on a £60,000 reserve at Christie's in 1998, but sold to a private collector after the sale. Reportedly then sold to his old club, Fulham, for £80,000.

Gordon Banks – sold for £110,000 hammer to anonymous phone bidder, Christie's South Kensington, March 2001

Note: Manager Sir Alf Ramsey did not get a medal in 1966 but was awarded one posthumously in June 2009 along with the rest of the non-playing members. These medals differed in design from the originals. Jimmy Greaves, who missed the final due to injury, sold his medal at Graham Budd on November 10-11, 2014, for £44,000.
