Fabulous Tiffany flatware served up in a Gilded Age

The sale of Silver and Objects of Vertu at Bonhams Knightsbridge on October 20-21 was topped by a multi-estimate bid for a remarkable flatware service by Tiffany. Each of the 108 pieces is acid-etched, engraved and enamelled in the Japanese style with naturalistic flowers.

The so-called 'Lap-Over-Edge' design, designed by Charles Grosjean for Tiffany & Co in 1880, was among the New York firm's most opulent output, with this service seemingly a custom-made order from c.1891. Realistic studies of daffodils, snowdrops, delphiniums, thistles, roses and lilacs grace every handle. It matches another service discussed in William Hood's Tiffany Silver Flatware, 1845-1905 that was ordered as a wedding present for Mary Louise Easton of La Crosse, Wisconsin, by her parents in 1891. It was previously thought to be a one-off.

Huge group of Royal Worcester comes to market

by Laura Chesters

A vast collection of Royal Worcester porcelain put together by an Australian couple during frequent trips to UK dealers and auction houses is up for sale next month.

Businessman Terry Wheeler and his wife Tena began collecting in the late 1990s after attending an auction in Perth, Australia.

Terry, who had established a successful minerals testing business which he sold in 2008, had the funds to pursue their passion for the best available examples.

Tena said: "It probably helped that I had a brother in England who I saw every year and could time those visits to coincide with porcelain sales at the leading auction houses such as Bonhams and Christie's."

Now in their 80s, the Wheelers are selling their large Perth family home and are

LS Lowry match view nets a record result

by Alex Capon

Despite wider economic uncertainty, prices for LS Lowry (1887-1976) seem to keep on rising.

A couple of lots sold recently underlined this, most prominently the auction of one of the artist's most famous works, Going to the Match, which fetched a record price for the artist at Christie's.

Offered at the Modern British & Irish Art evening sale on October 19 with a £5m-8m estimate, it drew a competition between three bidders, two on the phone and one in the room, before it was knocked down to the room bidder at £6.6m.

The winning bid was placed by Julia Fawcett, chief executive of The Lowry in Salford, who was sitting in the front row of the Christie's saleroom alongside the museum's director of visual art Michael Simpson.

The gallery paid £7.8m (including fees) after receiving a gift from the Law Family Charitable Foundation, set up by the hedge fund manager Andrew Law and his wife, Zoë.

Following the sale, Fawcett said: "This evening, thanks to an incredibly generous gift from The Law Family Charitable Foundation, we are delighted to have purchased Going to the Match for the city's collection of LS Lowry works. We look forward to bringing it home to Salford, where it can continue to delight and attract visitors to the Andrew and Zoë Law Galleries at The Lowry."

New height

The painting from 1953 showing fans flocking towards a stadium outscored the previous auction record for Lowry, The Football Match from 1949 which sold for £5m in the same rooms in 2011.

Going to the Match was reappearing at auction having sold at Sotheby's for £1.75m in 1999. Back then, it was bought by the Professional Footballers' Association (PFA) which placed it on loan at The Lowry when that opened in 2000.

Here it was being sold on behalf of The Players Foundation, a charity dedicated to footballers' welfare formerly known as the Professional Footballers' Association Charity, but no longer under the umbrella of the PFA.

The work itself is the largest example from a group of Lowry paintings depicting sporting scenes and venues.

Going to the Match was painted for an exhibition in 1953 sponsored by The Football Association, where Lowry won first prize. He depicted Burnden Park, former home of Bolton Wanderers.

Sea sells

Meanwhile, a Lowry seascape from the early 1940s sold for £840,000 at Tennants in Leyburn, North Yorkshire, on October 15. The auction house said it sold to a European buyer.

The price paid including 22% buyer's premium was £1.07m, which was the highest for any picture sold at Tennants and the second-highest price for any lot at the saleroom.

While the majority of Lowry's seascapes depict the north-west coast in places such as Lytham and Rhyl, the 1966 painting at Leyburn, titled The North Sea, was inspired by his visits to the Seaburn Hotel in Sunderland where he always stayed in the same room which looked straight out at the North Sea.

While his earlier pictures focused on seafronts bustling with holiday makers, from the early 1940s he began to paint pure seascapes with nothing but sea and sky.

Lowry wrote: "I started to paint the sea, nothing but the sea. But a sea with no shore and nobody sailing on it.... Look at my seascapes, they don't really exist you know, they're just an expression of my own loneliness."

This particular painting was last seen on public view in an exhibition in 1967 and came fresh to the market from the collection of a lady in the north-west of England.

According to Tennants, she knew Lowry and would meet the artist in Morecambe, later recounting his delight in the simple pleasures of eating ice cream and his visible enjoyment of the seaside town.

China cabinet displays its $2.2m appeal

An undisputed 'ace' of English furniture, this 'glasscase' was supplied by the St Martin's Lane cabinet-maker William Vile to Queen Charlotte (1744-1818) for the Bow Closet in St James's Palace.

The original commission is recorded in an account of payments made to Vile in 1761. The entry reads: For an exceeding neat Mahogany [sic] Glasscase with Plate Glass Doors at Top & Wood Doors at bottom Carv'd exceeding Rich & neat & Exquisite fine wood, all the backs & Shelves of Mahogany. Very fine Locks & 3 keys two of them Pearc'd & Engraved in a very neat Manner. £100.

The piece, owned by leading collector Geoffrey Blackwell when pictured in RW Symonds' Masterpieces of English Furniture and Clocks (1940), has all the features of the very best of English cabinetmaking. The sumptuous timber (one even used in the shelves and backboards as described in the bill) is matched by precision carving, possibly by the artisan Sefferin Alken who worked for Vile on other important commissions.

Acquired by Ann and Gordon Getty from dealer James Hepworth in 1994, it was estimated to bring up to $1m as part of a 60-lot 'highlights' sale on the evening of October 20. With premium, the price was $2.7m.

The collection, a rich mix of nearly 1500 lots from the Getty's San Francisco residence, was being sold across four days of live auctions from October 20-23 plus a further six online sales. Proceeds from the sale (the first event already racking up close to $80m including premium) will benefit the Ann and Gordon Getty Foundation for the Arts.

Only a small number of pieces of English furniture have made over £2m.

Chippendale's Harrington commode took a premium-inclusive £3.8m at Sotheby's in 2010, while a parcel gilt padouk cabinet-on-stand, also attributed to Chippendale, sold for £2.7m at Christie's in June 2008.

Walpole's cat-killing fish bowl returns to Strawberry Hill

A Chinese jardiniere once used as a fish bowl by Horace Walpole (1717-97) is to return to his Strawberry Hill home, writes Laura Chesters.

The 17th century piece decorated in the 'Three Friends of Winter' pattern with pine, prunus and bamboo was owned by Walpole (the 4th Earl of Orford) and was with him at his home in Arlington Street before being brought to Strawberry Hill sometime in the 1760s.

The jardiniere has a macabre story from its time with Walpole. His favourite cat, Selima, drowned in it while trying to catch goldfish. The incident was later immortalised in a mock-heroic ode by Walpole's friend (an Eton schoolmate), the poet Thomas Gray, called Ode on the Death of a Favourite Cat, Drowned in a Tub of Gold Fishes (1747).

In 1773, Walpole, the famed historian, collector and social commentator who built Strawberry Hill, commissioned a Gothic-style pedestal for the jardiniere to stand on with a label displaying the first stanza of the poem. It was placed on prominent display in the cloisters.

The bowl was sold when the contents of the house were auctioned in the 19th century but it has now returned to the Gothic Revival home in Twickenham thanks to the government's Acceptance in Lieu scheme, administered by the Arts Council.

The arrangement was negotiated by Christie's and settles £790,000 of tax.

Derek Purnell, director at Strawberry Hill House & Garden, said the jardiniere's true value "recently emerged". He added: "Traditionally described as a typical 18th-century Chinese product, made for a foreign clientele, Walpole's porcelain vase is in reality an older and more valuable object." The jardiniere is of "exceptional quality", he said.

offering 90 pieces of their collection with local firm Phil Caldwell Auctioneers on November 13.

The collection put together over 25 years was purchased from dealers including David and Valerie Main (of Valerie Main) and Peter Marsh Fine Ceramics.

David Main said: "It is one of the finest collections we have been associated with in our 35-plus years of handling Royal Worcester."

The couple also bought at auction houses including the now closed West Midlands firm Walker Barnett & Hill, Lyon & Turnbull and McTear's of Scotland, as well as Leonard Joel, Elders and Phil Caldwell in Australia.

On many trips to the UK the couple also visited the Worcester Museum.

The sale will take place in the couple's Perth home on November 13.

According to the couple, it was sold for more than Aus$200,000 to an Adelaide collector when Phil Caldwell sold the Royal Worcester collection known as the Wales collection in 2002. The Wheelers later purchased the vase after a long negotiation with its owner.

discovery is unknown but it came by descent from the family of US department store owner Nathan Ohrbach (1885-1972). He and his wife Tillie, who had been particularly drawn to the service because of the initial T engraved to each piece, appear to have acquired it as business boomed in the late 1920s. His book Getting Ahead in Retailing published in 1935 included the slogan 'a business in millions, a profit in pennies'.

Consigned to Bonhams via an email enquiry, the service had an estimate of £40,000-60,000 but attracted multiple bidders, particularly those from the US looking to take advantage of the strong dollar. The winning bid of £265,000 (£334,200 including 27.5/26% buyer's premium) was tendered by a US bidder.

The Apollo Award for an Outstanding Indian & Islamic Work of Art from a Dealer went to Runjeet Singh for an 18th century Maharani dhal (shield). ## Pick of the week

Furniture aimed at putting food on tables

In the early 1930s, following the closure of many of its ironstone mines, unemployment in the east Cleveland region of North Yorkshire reached a harrowing 90%. As the miners and their families faced great hardship, a group of local landowners embarked on well-meaning schemes to feed mouths and teach new skills.

'Major Jim' and 'Red Ruth' Pennyman, owners of Ormesby Hall sited in the heart of industrial Middlesbrough, were among them. They provided land for growing crops and raising livestock and started a workshop to teach the miners carpentry and other crafts. The simple Deco-style domestic furniture they made, known as Boosbeck Industry Furniture, was sold locally from a showroom provided by the Pennymans in nearby North Ormesby.

The scheme, designed to put food on the table at the time of the Great Depression, is covered in some detail at Ormesby Hall, which came into the possession of the National Trust in the 1960s. An archaeological dig by Durham University in 2018 at the nearby site known to locals since the 1930s as

Heartbreak Hill unearthed many artefacts now on display, while the Boosbeck furniture showroom is replicated in the house and a bedroom decked out with original furniture.

Boosbeck furniture is seldom seen at auction. The Price Guide database on thesaleroom.com lists just one: the oak and plywood sideboard offered as part of the sale of Modern Art & Design at Anderson & Garland in Newcastle upon Tyne on October 13.

Fashioned in the 'Cotswolds' style with three fitted panel doors raised on block style supports, it was branded inside with a circular BI logo. It came for sale from an outbuilding in Alwick and was sold by a descendant of the Pennyman family. It was thought to have been bought from the workshop in the 1930s by Jim Pennyman's cousin – a story that tallies with the understanding that Boosbeck furniture was never a bestseller.

"Apparently at the time it had proved difficult to sell," says Anderson & Garland chairman Julian Thomson. "It seems the Perrymans had often gone cap in hand to friends and family encouraging them to purchase what the general public hadn't really wanted to buy."

Clearly a piece of considerable local significance, but one in rather tired condition, it was estimated at £50-150 but sold at £1700 (plus 25% buyer's premium) to a North Yorkshire private buyer. Roland Arkell

Five new faces at south London firm

West Norwood auction house Roseberys has made a series of appointments across several departments.

In Chinese, Japanese & South East Asian Art, run by head of department Bill Forrest, Rosa Assennato joins as senior specialist.

Prior to maternity leave Assennato worked at Bonhams Knightsbridge. She joined the firm in 2010 and became its head of Asian Art in 2016. She has also appeared as an expert on the BBC's Antiques Roadshow.

The department has also welcomed Ruixue Li who joins as associate specialist. Li previously worked at Chiswick Auctions specialising in Chinese art and prior to that worked as an artist assistant.

Marie Ma joins the team as a sale co-ordinator and junior cataloguer. She previously worked in museums in China and more recently with Alastair Gibson Auctions in the UK.

In Roseberys' Modern British & 20th Century department Nicole Schembre joins as associate specialist working with head of sale William Summerfield and fellow associate specialist Sophie Hetherton. Schembre was previously at Toronto's Waddington's Auctioneers specialising in Canadian and Indigenous art.

In its Modern & Contemporary Prints & Multiples department, Roseberys has appointed Madeleine White as associate specialist working alongside head of department Ed Plackett. White has previously worked at auction houses including Chiswick Auctions, Woolley & Wallis and Wessex Auction Rooms.

Conference centres on forensic science

A conference organised by The Art Loss Register will focus on forensic science and technology and its use in the art world.

The event features panels of experts including from Cranfield Forensic Institute, Delft University of Technology (TU Delft) and the Rijksmuseum.

Topics covered throughout the day include the role of forensics in setting standards in the art world, the impact of forensics on condition reports and science and the connoisseur

The Application of Forensic Science and Technology in the Art Trade will take place on November 14 at The Apothecaries' Hall in Blackfriars Lane in London, which is also the Art Loss Register's new office.

Winterton opens a Burton branch

Richard Winterton Auctioneers has opened a valuations unit in Burton Market Hall. It will offer valuations on set days and times for jewellery and watches as well as for auction consignment drop off. Special valuation events will also be held at the location such as toys and railwayana with toy specialist Jon Price on November 14.

The new unit is the family firm's third Staffordshire premises, joining its headquarters at The Lichfield Auction Centre, Fradley Park, and The Tamworth Auction Rooms, which opened in October 2021.

Bacon triptych leads Frieze Week

The overall total from London's Frieze Week auctions was virtually identical to the figures from before the pandemic.

The sales at Sotheby's, Christie's and Phillips raised a combined £232.3m including fees, compared to £232.1m for the equivalent figure in October 2019. However, the higher rate of inflation meant the turnover was less in real terms.

Sotheby's Contemporary art evening sale on October 14 was the highest-grossing auction of the series, raising £85.7m.

It included the top lot of the Frieze Week sales: Francis Bacon's Three Studies for Portrait of Henrietta Moraes from 1963. The small-scale triptych was Bacon's second work in this format and was acquired in the year it was painted by American media mogul William S Paley (1901-90).

Consigned to Sotheby's by the charitable foundation he established, it was subject to an irrevocable bid and sold to a phone bidder at £20.9m (£24.3m with fees).

The sale also set a record for Frank Auerbach when a study of his most famed sitter, Head of J.Y.M., was knocked down at £4.7m.

Focus on microscope owned by Joseph Banks

A microscope used by Joseph Banks (1743-1820) on Captain Cook's first Voyage of Discovery (1768-71) is going under the hammer estimated at £30,000-50,000 on November 1.

On offer at Charles Miller's auction in London, the Ellis-type Aquatic microscope by Peter Dolland, c.1768, is one of four used by Banks and is engraved Joseph Banks / H.M.B. Endeavour.

When Banks was offered the chance to accompany Captain Cook, he set about acquiring one of the finest collections of naturalists' instruments and accessories he could – including this one designed by John Ellis.

Before the voyage, Ellis advised Banks on what equipment he should take aboard the Endeavour and his suggestions included his 'modified' aquatic microscope, which Banks purchased for the considerable sum of £2-12-6 so he could carry out marine biology observations as well as use it as a dissecting microscope for entomology and botany.

The Endeavour circumnavigated the globe, visiting South America, Tahiti, New Zealand, Australia and Java.

The microscope subsequently had quite a journey on its own: it headed to the Knatchbull family via Banks' wife Dorothea Hugessen (1758-1828), then was believed dispersed at one of a series of London sales of Banks' effects between 1886-93 at Sotheby's and Puttick & Simpson, where it is presumed to have been bought by VB Crowther-Beynon (1865-1941), a well-known antiquarian and a member of numerous antiquarian and archaeological societies, in many of which he held office.

It was then sold by Crowther-Beynon's wife Mary (1856-1952) as part of his effects by Cavendish House Auctioneers, Cheltenham, in December 1950, where it was bought by the vendor's late father.

A copy of the auction catalogue is included in the lot.

Macbeth collar found in a market

Glasgow School designer's embroidered silk design instantly stood out in a box of fabric

by Roland Arkell

As Glasgow School discoveries go, they don't get much better than an embroidered silk collar made by Ann Macbeth (1875-1948) and very likely worn by her for a portrait photograph taken in 1900.

It was found by the keen-eyed vendor in a box of fabric at a Glasgow market and instantly stood out for its quality. Entered for sale at the Lyon & Turnbull (26/25% buyer's premium) Design since 1860 sale in Edinburgh on October 12, it doubled expectations at £9500.

An inspiring artist, teacher and women's rights activist, Macbeth was the most talented student of Jessie Newbery who ran the embroidery department at the Glasgow School of Art.

Her striking embroideries and accessories in the Glasgow style were a regular feature in The Studio, with this collar illustrated in the magazine's 1908 edition and later shown as part of The Crafts Exhibition, Old Bluecoat School, Liverpool, 1912.

Detachable collars and cuffs were popular because they added colour and decoration to the plainest of outfits. They were frequently used by the embroiderers of the Glasgow School of Art. A photograph in the collection of the Glasgow Museums shows Macbeth wearing a very similar – perhaps even the same – garment.

Cranston's tearoom chair

Leading the sale was a dark-stained and waxed oak ladderback chair with original drop-in rush seat designed by Charles Rennie Mackintosh for Catherine Cranston's Argyle Street tearooms in 1898. It was the second time the Glasgow architect and entrepreneur had worked together.

Used at one end of the Luncheon Room, about 20 chairs of this robust design appear in contemporary photographs, of which five are known to survive.

Estimated at £8000-12,000, it sold at £26,000. ■

Perfume burners and famous horse set the saleroom pace

Leading the sale of Fine Furniture, Works of Art & Clocks at Woolley & Wallis (25/12% buyer's premium) in Salisbury on October 6 was a very fine pair of blue john and ormolu perfume burners by Matthew Boulton and John Fothergill, writes Roland Arkell.

Estimated at £15,000-20,000, they took £70,000.

Determined to challenge French dominance in the market, Boulton and his partner had created a department for the large-scale production of ormolu works of art at the newly built Soho Manufactory in Birmingham in 1768.

Polished stone vases with mounts satisfying the craze for the 'antique' accounted for the majority of the firm's ormolu production – the most popular made from the Derbyshire purple, blue and yellow fluorspar known as blue john.

In March 1770 Boulton visited the court and sold several vases of this type to Queen Charlotte while others were offered at sales held by James Christie in 1771 and 1772.

A number of variations on a 'Roman' theme are extant, most with reversible covers allowing the vases to function as either a candle sconce or as a cassolette to hold perfume or incense.

Most are illustrated in Volume 1 of the Boulton & Fothergill pattern book preserved in Birmingham City Archives.

The 10in (24cm) pair at Woolley & Wallis are a particularly pleasing model, with ram's head terminals to the handles and white marble waisted socles. A pair is pictured in Nicholas Goodison's Matthew Boulton: Ormolu (2002).

Earlier date suspected

The sale of Furniture, Clocks & Rugs at Lawrences (22.5% buyer's premium inc VAT) of Crewkerne on October 14 was topped, unexpectedly by a cast of one of Giambologna's favourite models, The Pacing Horse.

This well-known composition, similar to the equestrian monument to Cosimo I erected in the Piazza della Signoria, Florence, in 1594, was repeatedly cast for generations.

Small-scale bronzes were produced first in

Giambologna's workshop, then in the studios of Pietro Tacca and Antonio Susini (one was sent to Henry Stuart, Prince of Wales in 1612 and inherited on his deathbed by his brother, the future Charles I) and latterly by followers well into the 19th century.

This Somerset example was undated in the catalogue but there is a good case for suggesting it may be 17th century. The thin oval base is consistent with earlier casts as are the filled spries (visible from the base) made to hold the casting sprues that extended from the soles of the horse's hooves.

Certainly, bidders rated it much higher than the £1000-1500 estimate that might have been enough for a 19th century reproduction. The hammer price was £38,000.

Rutting Pan and Pliny's Doves take their place in an eclectic selection offered by Somerset saleroom

Nineteenth-century Grand Tourists and souvenirs from the Orient made for a highly successful outing at Bristol where micro-mosaic panels, intaglios and Chinese vessels led the way at Clevedon Auction Rooms (22% buyer's premium).

Eleven micro mosaics expected to bring between £4430 and £6220 totalled £17,780 at the September 1 sale. Ten came from the same local vendor including the top-sellers, the 2 x 1½in (5 x 4cm) example illustrated here depicting Pan and a goat rutting and a more familiar 2 x 3in (5 x 8cm) copper-backed scene of the Colosseum in the manner of Domenico Moglia (1780-1862).

Estimated at £500-700 and £1000-1500 respectively, each sold at £3600.

Another perennial favourite was a 2¼in (6cm) diameter metal-backed panel depicting Pliny's Doves in the manner of Giacomo Raffaelli (1753-1836). Upgraded from a general sale, it was pitched at £600-800 and sold at £3000.

All three went to the same local private buyer.

Collection of intaglios

From another private source was a large collection of intaglios. The technique of incising or engraving patterns on stones leaving the background untouched (the opposite of cameos) for rings or seals goes back to Sumerian times but has been associated with Italian craftsmen since the days of Rome.

The 19th century Clevedon pieces came from a vendor whose relative, perhaps in the jewellery trade, had travelled extensively in Europe and the Far East.

Possibly removed from signet rings, they were offered in seven multi-lots and totalled nearly 10-times the top pre-sale expectations at £15,160, going to a mixture of UK dealers and private buyers.

Chinese estimates eclipsed

Estimates were also eclipsed for Chinese material. A group of 3in (8cm) tall porcelain ovoid vases, all in good order, comprised one from the Republic period painted with a continuous mountain landscape and red lozenge to the base and four painted with foliage and insects bearing six-character marks. They were estimated at £100-150 but took £8200 via thesaleroom.com.

Unmarked and carefully catalogued only as 'antique' was a 9in diameter x 4in high (22 x 9.5cm) cloisonné enamel bowl, decorated in Ming style with lotus blossoms and scrollwork, the interior with a fish amid waves.

Generally in good condition, there was some loss of decoration around the rim of the base and 'pock' marks all over from the production process but, against a £150-250, it took another online bid of £8200. Both lots went back to China.

Mayer rivals Pratt for promotion

Among the most desirable of all 'Prattware' transfer printed wares are the series of very rare and highly decorative advertising plaques produced for firms such as Crosse & Blackwell and Huntley & Palmers.

The example offered by Kinghams (23% buyer's premium) in Moreton-in-Marsh on October 6 was by TJ & J Mayer, a commercial rival to F&R Pratt of Fenton, the leading manufacturer of pot lids and a huge range of related wares. It was part of a collection of pot lids and associated wares that (although the estimates did not suggest it) included a number of rarities.

While not obvious from the image of three Victorian ladies enjoying the theatre, this 9 x 6in (22 x 16cm) plaque promotes the merits of Rowland's Odonto, a tooth-whitening product.

A similar piece was sold by Berkshire specialist Historical & Collectable in June 2001 for £3000 so this Gloucestershire example – part of a collection of pot lids and advertising wares – attracted a huge number of admirers at its £60-100 estimate. It took £3400.

Oil extra

As serendipity had it, another Mayer plaque made for Rowland's appeared for sale at Historical & Collectable (20% buyer's premium) on October 18 guided at £300-600. It depicts a maid combing the hair of a lady and is titled Rowland's Macassar Oil.

Proving that the price at Kinghams was no fluke, it took £1500, despite a hair crack to the corner.

Bold jewellery designer can boast a Bond connection

Charles de Temple is much admired as a key figure in the British 1960s modernist movement – one of the designers who ushered bold and abstract jewellery to the forefront of fashion.

He also enjoys a special status as a jeweller with a connection to the Bond franchise. De Temple made the ‘gold finger’ jewel that Honor Blackman wore at the 1962 premiere of the film Goldfinger and designed the ‘All the Time in the World’ ring that is central to the narrative of On Her Majesty’s Secret Service (1969).

‘All the Time in the World’ was the title of Louis Armstrong’s theme song as well as being the final words of the film.

Bond (George Lazenby) recounts the phrase as he holds his new bride Contessa Teresa di Vicenzo (Dianna Rigg) lifeless in his arms.

Prototype version

The bicoloured openwork ring offered at the London Jewels sale at Bonhams (27.5/25% buyer’s premium) on September 21 was not one of the two rings made specifically for use in the Bond film. Those were sold at Sotheby’s: one in 2019 for £42,000, another in February this year for £45,000.

However, it is believed to be a prototype made c.1965. It was purchased by the owner’s father, a close friend of de Temple. Estimated at £8000-12,000, it sold at £25,000.

Following the release of the film, de Temple garnered a great deal of success and by popular demand, a limited edition of 50 rings were produced instead reading ‘All the Love in the World’. These too occasionally come to market.

Another strong performing ‘retro’ jewel in this sale was a Piaget necklace and watch pendant from c.1970. The ‘Lariet’ comprising a three-row fancy-link chain suspending a watch pendant and two turquoise bead drops came in its maker’s case accompanied by the original 1970s marketing poster from Piaget. Estimated at up to £25,000, it took £55,000.

The perfect present for a love-ate relationship

Often from poor communities and mostly illiterate, men were limited in the ways in which they could plight their troth in 18th and 19th century Wales, writes Roland Arkell.

The gift of a wooden love spoon carved with symbols of marital bliss – an anchor for security, a keyhole for the family home, a chain to maintain the link between lovers – was an eccentric means of solving this problem. Some personalised with dates, initials, and romantic inscriptions, the 50 or more examples offered by Bonhams (27.5/26/20/14.5% buyer’s premium) in Edinburgh on September 27 included some of the finest made in the late 18th and early 19th century before commercial production began.

Amassed by a Welsh couple throughout their married life, the collection included items from a number of well-known British tree groups including pieces from the WJ Shepherd collection sold at Sotheby’s in 1983. Bonhams called it the finest collection of Welsh treen ever presented for sale.

Pictured here are some of the individual highlights, including an early 19th century broad handled spoon initialled RS which was pierced with a gunship in sail and a whale, which topped proceedings at £800.

1. 18th century spoon with broad shaped and carved handle, pierced with two hearts with chip carved decoration, 9½in (25cm). Ex Shepherd collection – £450.

2. Mid-18th century spoon with long, flat and broad handle chip carved with geometric patterns and pierced with hearts, stars and moons, 15½in (40cm) – £550.

3. Unusual 19th century spoon with square section handle of lantern form with glazed sides enclosing two balls, the shaped terminal pierced with a heart, 8½in (22cm) – £280.

4. An 18th century spoon with square section handle with lantern and single ball, initialled in red SB, with seven-link chain, 12in (31cm), excluding chain – £600.

5. Late 18th century spoon with circular section handle divided into four parts each with an internal ball, 7½in (20cm) long – £280.

6. A 19th century spoon with pierced broad flat handle, scratch carved and inlaid with hearts, with two internal small spoons, 11in (29cm) long – £700.

7. Early 19th century spoon with a broad handle pierced with a gun ship in sail, a whale, birds, heart and key, initialled RS, 23cm (9in) long – £800.

8. An 18th century yew spoon with square section handle with lantern and two balls and the open shaped terminal also with a ball, 8½in (22cm) long – £400.

Token value back in the day, now worth thousands

Coin dealer Patrick Deane first became interested in 17th and 18th century trade tokens in 1970 when working at Spink and Son. He sold his first collection of around 1250 pieces in 1984.

Twenty years or so elapsed before the collection was re-started when Deane was given the opportunity to acquire pieces from the celebrated Victorian collection of Francis Cokayne – including those from several cabinets that were ‘lost’ and unaccounted for since the 1940s.

Now numbering around 2500 items, it will be sold in two or three parts by Baldwin’s (20% buyer’s premium) in London – the first tranche was offered on October 5.

Coin substitute

The first 18th century tokens were issued in the British Isles at a time when there was little official copper small change in circulation to cover life’s small transactions. Copying the regal issue would be deemed ‘counterfeiting’ so instead in 1788 an Anglesey copper mine hit on the idea of making similar weight ‘tokens’ that could be redeemable in the official coin.

This collection possessed many examples including some of the die trials for the Parys Mine Company token – which would have been made for the owners to approve before general production. A uniface penny, showing only the cowed head of a druid, sold for £3500 against an estimate of £800-1200 while a halfpenny ‘mule’ token featuring heads to both sides, guided at £1500-2000, took £5000.

Deane had been fortunate to buy a Sawbridgeworth Penny, struck by grocer and tea merchant Robert Orchard in 1801, from the Baldwin Basement Collection, for half what he was expecting to pay.

This piece, with Orchard’s portrait on the obverse and a view of the Hertfordshire town to the reverse, is one of just five in existence. The dies were so deeply engraved that they broke quickly under the extra pressure needed to make the strike.

One of the known examples holds the record price for any tradesman’s token sold at auction. A Sawbridgeworth Penny sold for a mighty £145 at Glendinings in 1923 while another in the Noble collection auctioned in Melbourne in July 1988 sold for a remarkable Aus$60,000.

The token in the Deane collection, which survives essentially as struck, was offered an estimate of £5000-7000 and sold at £12,000.

When charm is simplicity itself

Naive artworks that can also suit modern decorating taste are rising in popularity and price

by Alex Capon

Works with a naive charm but decorative appeal have been experiencing growing demand over recent years.

Often by unknown or itinerant artists, pictures in this slightly quirky sub-category of the art market have in some cases risen quicker in price than art by more established names from the same period.

As well as the way they capture elements of social history, buyers are attracted to these works as curios. More recently, greater appeal has been engendered thanks to their idiosyncratic decorative qualities that seems to sit well with modern tastes.

A few examples sold at auction in the last couple of months underlined this trend.

Little-known painter

Attracting attention at Clevedon Salerooms (22% buyer's premium) on September 1 was a painting of prize shorthorn bull and a sheep by Lucas Beattie (fl.1830-40s).

Few works by the little-known artist are recorded as ever having sold at auction. One from 1833 depicting a bay racehorse called Moonraker emerged in 1993. Another was unsold at Bonhams Los Angeles in April 2021 – a painting from 1837 of a racehorse called Chit Chat which had been given a $3000-5000 estimate. That pitch might have seemed rather high for an artist with almost no track record but, judging by the demand that emerged 18 months later across the Atlantic in Clevedon, perhaps it was not so ill judged.

According to Sally Mitchell's 1985 reference book The Dictionary of British Equestrian Artists, Beattie was born in Wolverhampton and, as well as cattle, also painted horses and dogs. "His landscapes are good and very finished but his horses tend towards a slight flatness," she commented. "However, he was able to depict his horses' shiny coats with great ability."

This bovine subject at Clevedon also showed enough painterly quality to suggest he operated at a level above the amateur or self-taught itinerant artists practising at the time. Indeed, it seems likely he was able to gain some significant commissions; the presence of the animal's owner in this

1. Prize shorthorn and sheep by Lucas Beattie – £5800 at Clevedon Salerooms.

2. View of a house with projecting angle pavilions, a work catalogued as 'Anglo-Dutch school (c.1740) – £30,000 at Dreweatts.

3. Costume design by Oliver Messel – £2800 at Dreweatts.

His horses tend towards a slight flatness... but he was able to depict the shiny coats with great ability and other pictures reflecting that.

The 2ft 1in x 2ft 6in (63 x 75cm) oil on canvas, which was signed and dated 1833, came to auction from a deceased estate having previously been owned by a farming family in north Shropshire for whom the saleroom had already sold some standard 'farmhouse' furniture.

Showing a Hereford bull, it may well have been commissioned by the landowner after winning a prize at a local livestock show.

In terms of its condition, it had some major issues including two holes, scratches, flaking and the canvas sitting loose in the stretcher leading to a square outline a few inches inside the frame.

But, even in this state, the style and subject matter found appeal – buyers of these works prefer large animals with plenty of presence and rustic charm of which this was a good example and which, rarely, was signed by a known artist and dated.

Due to the condition and the previously unsold work at Bonhams, the auction house pitched it at £800-1200, a level that drew two strong commission bids including one from the specialist antiques (but not picture) trade. After further competition, it was knocked down at £5800 to a different bidder, a specialist gallery which is planning to restore it carefully.

Twenty years ago such a work would have done well to make a tenth of this price – a growth in value not seen for many 19th century pictures.

The result followed a portrait of a Longhorn cow by an unknown naive artist flying past a £200-300 estimate to make £7000 at Dominic Winter in March (see ATG No 2537).

House call

Another work with a certain naive element but more grand in subject matter posted the top price at Dreweatts (25% buyer's premium) in Newbury on October 3.

Part of the collection formerly at Flaxley Abbey, a Grade I-listed property in Gloucestershire, the Anglo-Dutch English School painting of an unidentified country house dated from c.1740.

It had previously been part of the Messel family collection kept at Nymans House in West Sussex, until that burnt down in 1947, and then hung in the drawing room at nearby Holmstead Manor where the family relocated.

The collection at Flaxley Abbey had been specially designed or sourced by artist, interior designer and stage set producer Oliver Messel (1904-78) for the property's owner, the industrialist Frederick Baden Watkins, over a period of 12 years.

Messel also supplied works he had inherited from his own family such as this 4ft 7in x 5ft 10in (1.4 x 1.8m) oil on canvas.

The view of the house and park with an oval pool and figures in the foreground was painted by an unknown hand. Although not perhaps a major work by a top-rank artist, it still had plenty of architectural and topographical interest, capturing some of the estate's key features such as the projecting pavilions set at angles of the square centre block.

The layout of the estate can be seen in some of the engraved plans by Italian architect Sebastiano Serlio (c.1475-1554), which became influential in England in the 17th century.

One candidate for the location depicted here was Thirlestane Castle in the Scottish Borders, the seat of the Dukes of Lauderdale, although, since it was remodelled and enlarged in the 1840s, no record exists of the previous layout of its formal garden.

The design of the landscape in the picture was also of interest to students of garden history. The auction house pointed out that it dated from "a period in which formal continental-style gardens were being swept aside to make way for Capability Brown's vision of arcadia with elements of both clearly visible in the picture".

Dreweatts' head of house sales and private collections Joe Robinson said: "These types of large-scale parkland scenes are relatively rare and are enduringly popular with an appeal to a wide cross section of buyer."

"The subject matter and its scale ensured that it drew global interest from both academic and decorative bidders alike."

While it had some visible repairs, scattered retouching and varnish to the surface, bidders did not balk at the £7000-10,000 estimate. Bringing both trade and private interest, it drew good competition on the day and was knocked down at £30,000 to a phone buyer from the UK.

Messel made

Elsewhere at the Flaxley Abbey auction, a group of 11 framed sketches for stage sets and characters in costume by Messel himself all sold over estimate for a combined total of £18,300. The bidding was dominated by two private collectors.

Leading the pack was a design for the character Madam Malaprop in Richard Sheridan's comedy The Rivals, for a production performed at the Criterion Theatre in 1945.

Estimated at £1000-1500, the 19¼ x 13in (51 x 34cm) signed pencil, watercolour and gouache was pursued to £2800, a good price for a Messel costume design. ■

Dane in Dutch East Indies

The Danish artist Hugo Vilfred Pedersen (1870-1959) studied at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Copenhagen but afterwards spent 12 years travelling around Asia.

His tour of what was then known as the Dutch East Indies provided the illustrations for his 1902 publication Durch den Indischen Archipel.

A number of his surviving works depict characters and personalities at the Surakarta Palace in Java. One of them was an oil on canvas portrait of an Indonesian prince titled Emperor Toewan Soesoehoenan of Soerakarta.

It had last sold for £800 at Christie's in 2001 but attracted rather more attention as part of the Bonhams' Travel & Exploration sale in London on September 20. Estimated at £1000-1500, it brought £12,000.

Portaels part of the Barnwell Manor procession

A number of pictures from another single-owner collection caught the eye at Dreweatts a month earlier than the Flaxley Abbey auction.

The sale of lots from Barnwell Manor, the Northamptonshire base of the dealership Windsor House Antiques since 1999, comprised a large selection of furniture, sculpture, ceramics, garden ornaments and works of art – all fields in which the firm specialises. Offered on September 7-8, the smaller number of picture lots included an Orientalist scene by the Belgian painter Jean-François Portaels (1818-95).

Depicting a group of figures carrying the body of a warrior on a camel's back, the 4ft 4in x 6ft 2in (1.33 x 1.89m) signed oil on canvas was titled The Procession.

An impressively scaled and striking picture, these kind of monumental subjects tend to draw less demand than the artist's portraits of alluring female sitters but, as Portaels was the first Belgian artist to paint exotic and Orientalist subjects at first hand, they often still command interest. This example was pitched at £3000-5000, perhaps on account of its less than favourable condition. It had two holes in the canvas as well as a tear to the sky and another to the waist of the woman on the right. It also had some further paint loss and some significant retouching.

3. The Procession by Jean-François Portaels – £23,000.

Nevertheless, this failed to deter a number of bidders who carried it well beyond its attractive estimate. It took £23,000 from a private buyer.

While Portaels' portraits have sold for over twice this level on a number of occasions, this was the one of the higher sums recorded for one of his busier figurative compositions.

A couple of British portraits also attracted attention at the Windsor House Antiques sale.

A portrait of Elizabeth Taylor (no, not that one), the wife of Alexander Montgomerie of Annick Lodge (1766-1839), drew competition against a £2000-3000 pitch.

The 4ft 7in x 3ft 6in (1.41 x 1.06m) oil on canvas was signed by the artist Reuben Sayers (1815-88). However, the fact that it was inscribed and dated 1861 to the lower left suggested it was either painted posthumously or was copied from an earlier portrait – perhaps one done for the couple's marriage in 1784.

Works by Sayers, a portrait and genre painter who exhibited at the Royal Academy from 1841-1867, do not often emerge at auction – Artprice records only around a dozen pictures. This example, which surpassed a £2000-3000 estimate and sold at £6000 to a private buyer, posted the highest price so far.

Also bringing demand was a bust-length portrait of a gentleman wearing a brown coat and with a landscape beyond. Although unscrubbed (it was catalogued as 'English School, 19th century'), it had a certain swagger that appealed to a number of interested parties.

Again, a few condition issues did not dampen the demand too much (it had some areas of paint loss and a large restored area to the sky). Estimated at £800-1200, it was knocked down at £2600.

Virgil, the Scottish version

Translation was first time a major poem of antiquity appeared in an English language form

by Ian McKay

A work of 1553 billed as the first translation of a major poem from antiquity into any form of the English language was one of a small selection of just 25 books and manuscripts in an October 11 sale held by Bellmans (22% buyer's premium) that came mostly from one exceptional Scottish collection.

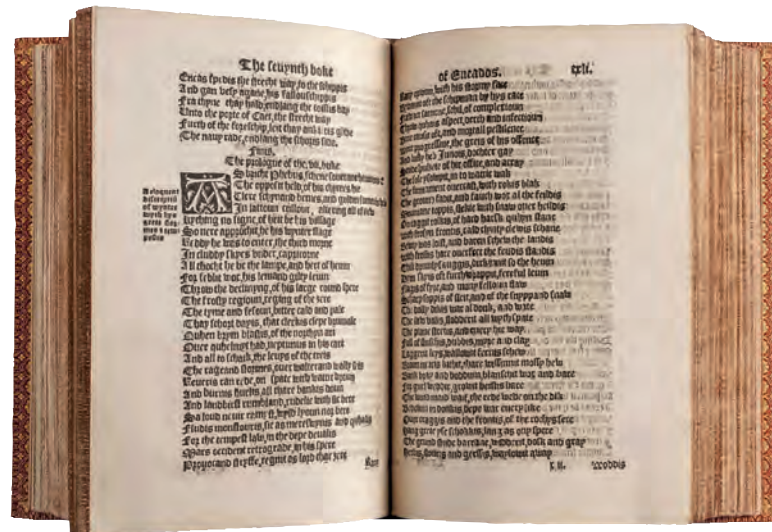

Finely bound in scarlet crushed morocco gilt by Rivière in the 19th century and sold at £24,000, this was The xiii. Bukes of Eneados of the famos Poete Virgili Translated out of Latyne verses into Scottish metir... by Gawin, or Gavin Douglas, Bishop of Dunkel (c.1474-1522).

It is defined in the extended title as a work presented in Scottish form, though printed in London for William Copland – who is not named but whose device appears on the title.

Ezra Pound, a later admirer of Douglas, said that "...he gets more out of Virgil than any other translator".

Bellmans had given the lot an estimate of £3000-5000. In December 2019 that same estimate had been placed on a copy in a 17th century calf gilt binding that was offered by Sotheby's as part of the library of the Earls of Haddington. And that one went on to sell at £50,000.

The Sotheby's catalogue had summed up the work's significance with quotes from the Oxford Dictionary of National Biography: "In the early 1500s no major classical work had been translated into English, and Douglas's Eneados was a pioneering work... [he] shared the values of the humanists: an antipathy to scholasticism, respect for classical authors, and a zeal for education."

Left: a spread from the copy of The xiii. Bukes of Eneados of the famos Poete Virgili... of 1553 sold by Bellmans at £24,000.

Below left: bid to £86,000 in the Billingshurst sale was an illuminated Latin Bible of the late 13th or early 14th century, believed to be of Parisian origin.

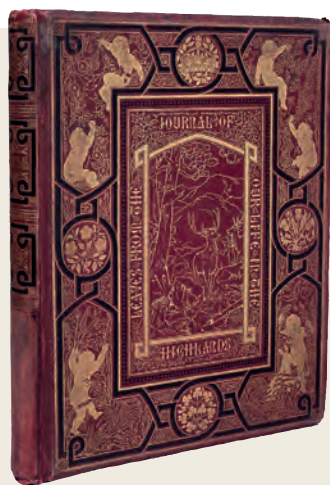

It continues: "He wished to communicate to his countrymen a knowledge of the Aeneid, and also to enrich his native 'Scottis' tongue with something of the 'fouth', or copiousness, of Latin."

Further successes

Bellmans enjoyed a number of other successes in its Billingshurst, West Sussex, saleroom.

An illuminated manuscript on vellum, a Latin Bible thought most likely to have come from a Parisian workshop in the 13th or early 14th century, was expected to sell for £20,000-30,000, but after fierce bidding on the phones and internet, with some bidders occasionally trying to speed up the process by suggesting higher increments, it eventually sold at £86,000 to a European dealer.

A copy of the famous 1493 Liber Chronicarum of Hartmann Schedel, more familiarly known as the 'Nuremberg Chronicle', sold at £50,000 to a German collector. ■

Victoria's journal of Highlands life affordable for the little people

An edition of Queen Victoria's Leaves from the Journal of our Life on the Highlands... took £550 at a Mallams (25% buyer's premium) sale of September 23 in Oxford.

It was, though, not one of the small number of original, limited edition copies produced in 1865 and 1867 for distribution among family and friends.

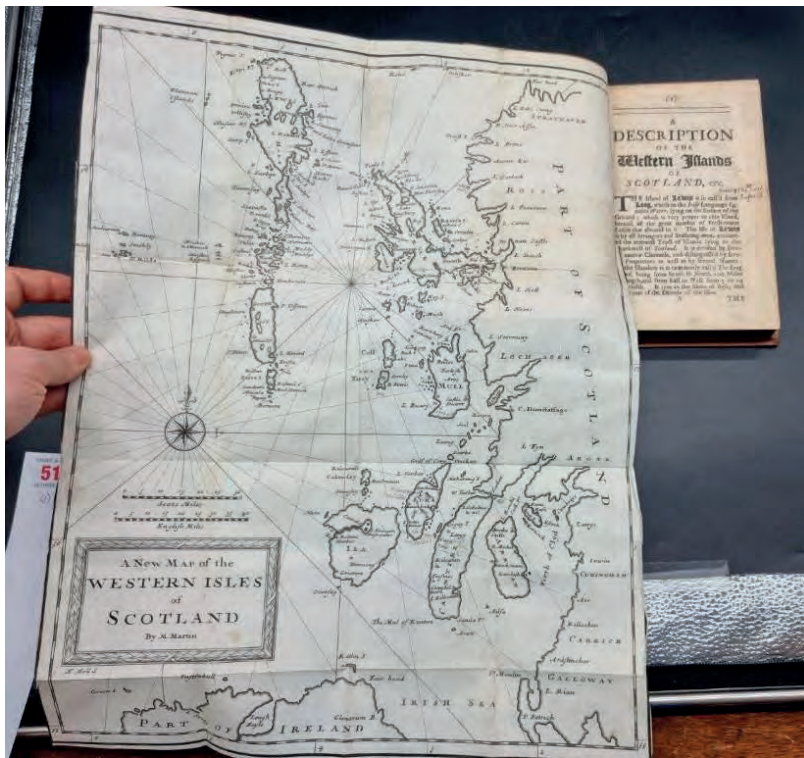

This was a version published in the normal manner in 1868, by Smith Elder & Co – the queen having expressed her view that the public editions "...should not be so dear, so that everyone can buy it". This copy did, however, contain an 1872 dedicatory inscription by Victoria to the Honourable Flora Macdonald, who served her as a Maid of Honour from 1847-74 and as a Woman of the Bedchamber from 1874-97.

A lot offering eight first edition copies of Ian Fleming's 007 novels from Casino Royale of 1953 to You Only Live Twice of 1964 led the auction. However, these copies lacked the all important dust jackets and the winning bid, albeit way over estimate, was just £3800.

A 1996 first of John Fowles' The Magus by the author dated July 1867 was additionally inscribed to Alf from Guy, presumably Guy Green, who directed the 1968 film version, said the cataloguer. It was sold at £520.

The way to locate buffaloes and locals with second sight

Bid to £3400, a 1703 first edition of Martin Martin's Description of the Western Islands of Scotland in a later full calf binding proved the most expensive item in the 250-lot book and ephemera section that opened an October 5-7 auction at Stride & Son (18% buyer's premium).

At that price it was a record breaker by some distance, the previous best for firsts being £500 and £480 for copies sold by Bloomsbury Auctions (2011) and Lyon & Turnbull (2018), while in 2008 Sotheby's sold a copy of the 1716, second edition from the great Macclesfield Library series of sales at £500.

The copy offered in Chichester, complete with its neatly repaired folding map of the Western Isles and single folding plate of a 'heathen temple', was one that over some 9pp bore extensive annotations in the hand of the naturalist and antiquary Peter Collinson (1694-1768), who also added a manuscript index.

Collinson's notes include information provided by a Dr Walker, who told him of his scepticism regarding the supposed second sight of some islanders and noted that there were "...neither wild horses or buffaloes in Scotland as Mr Buffons asserts in his nat:hist: taken from ignorant writers".

Watson's recipes

Other highlights included an 18th century manuscript recipe book of some 170pp, compiled by an Elizabeth Watson of Rochester and dated 1768. In a contemporary bellum binding, it sold at £1800.

Dating from 1765 was an 18pp catalogue produced for a sale of cased specimens of birds, animals, and other creatures. In stitched blue paper wrappers but lacking the final 'conditions of sale' leaf, it was originally priced at sixpence, but over 250 years on it prompted a far more substantial bid of £1000.

This iroko plan chest is believed to have been used by potter Bernard Leach to store woodcuts, etchings and designs.

It is thought that the chest, which carries the initials BL to the doors, was imported back to England after Leach returned from Japan in 1920 to set up the Leach Pottery in St Ives. Sold to the Trenowden family, probably by Leach's first wife, in the late 1920s or early 1930s, it was on display at the Craft Study Centre at Farnham in 2010 as part of the Bernard

Leach: Graphic Artist exhibition and at the Leach Pottery itself from 2013-15.

It is on offer in the studio ceramics sale at Adam Partridge in Macclesfield on October 28-29 with expectations of £3000-5000.

This rare Art Deco gem-set and diamond bar brooch by Gillot & Co, New York, has a guide of £15,000-20,000 at the Woolley & Wallis Fine Jewellery in Salisbury on November 2-3.

Trained in his native France, Paul Gillot (c.1877-1949) was a driving force in American jewellery at the start of the 20th century. He worked first with Marcus & Co for 12 years then – following service in the First World War – resumed trading in 1916 under his own name.

Earning the nickname 'the King of Diamonds', he was described as having designed 'the major portion of Sarah Bernhardt's jewellery' by the Yonkers Statesman newspaper in 1927.

This brooch made in the Egyptian revival taste is set with a well-matched selection of step-cut sapphires, rubies, emeralds and diamonds.

Feddens galore at British Art Fair

Works by the Modern British artist were abundant as the event returned to Chelsea

by Frances Allitt

At the recent British Art Fair, London firm Panter & Hall found a new buyer for a Mary Fedden picture – 20 years after purchasing it from the artist. The gallery had Chiswick Mall reframed before exhibiting it at the Chelsea show where it was ticketed at £19,500 and snapped up by new client.

Fedden (1915-2012) was on the lips of many dealers at the fair, which ran from September 29-October 2 at the Saatchi Gallery, its first in-person staging since 2019.

The event had its share of reinventions and challenges this year with new ownership and grim economic conditions. However, with many faithful clients turning up, sales were strong particularly in the fair's heartland of familiar Modern names.

Panter & Hall's Matthew Hall told ATG: "Sales were quite brisk at the event and there were a few after sales, which we don't usually have, most at the £3000-5000 range. Lots were good, solid RA artists from the 1930s-50s."

The Fedden was at the top end of the gallery's offerings. A prolific artist and perennial favourite with Mod Brit buyers, her work was widely offered at the fair.

The Bristol-born artist, wife of fellow Mod Brit painter Julian Trevelyan, is relatively accessible in terms of price point, style and subject matter. Particularly popular are her still-lives, landscapes populated with animals and depictions of cats, but there is plenty to choose from in her output.

A Fedden self-portrait was the centrepiece of long-term exhibitor Kaye Michie's stand. Michie dubbed this BAF "a lovely fair" with lots of good sales including that work.

For Jamie Anderson of first-time exhibitor Portland Gallery, the availability of Feddens posed a specific challenge. Ahead of staging a major show on the artist at its St James's premises (The Painter's Eye, November 10-December 2), the gallery brought along a major mid-five figure example – another stand centrepiece.

"The fair started slowly in terms of sales," Anderson said on the second day. "If you want a Fedden you can

2. Emily Young, Earth Dreamer II on the stand of Willoughby Gerrish where it was ticketed at £280,000.

3. Patrick Bourne & Co sold The Oil Lamp by Joan Eardley for a price just under £50,000.

4. Offered for around £2000, this oil on canvas by John Bratby sold from the stand of Freya Mitton.

go elsewhere in the event and get one for £5000. We're at a relatively high price point." (Not to worry, though – the gallery concluded the fair with sales of a William Turnbull sculpture and a drawing by Scottish Colourist JD Fergusson.)

Twentieth-century specialist Freya Mitton also sold works by Fedden, but also parted with works by John Bratby, John Copnall, Ken Howard and Henry Inlander among others, with some of the highlights going at or below the four-figure mark. Works in the second camp included a Breon O'Casey (1928-2011) Christmas card, which sold to an artist.

Scottish artists

Stand-out sales by major names were to be found across the board.

Patrick Bourne & Co kicked off proceedings with the sale of two works by female Scottish artists. One was by Anne Redpath (1895-1965), whom Bourne specialises in, and the other by Joan Eardley (1921-63), which sold to a Scottish collector for a price just under £50,000. Their sales started at around £6000.

Long-time participant Jonathan Clark sold works ranging from £20,000-300,000 with a William Scott near the top end of the range.

Fellow stalwart The Nine British Art found homes for works by Roger Hilton and Wilhelmina Barns-Graham at prices from £3500-100,000.

First-time exhibitor Willoughby Gerrish sold a large sculpture, Earth Dreamer II by Contemporary sculptor Emily Young, which was priced at £280,000. This was joined by sales of a William Staite Murray sculpture to the Hepworth Wakefield Museum, a frieze by Eduardo Paolozzi and a work by Anthony Caro.

Challenging times

New BAF owner Will Ramsay of Ramsay Fairs told ATG: "It wasn't flash-bang in terms of sales, but we were right in the middle of a budget that had many people throwing their arms up in the air."

Earlier this year he added BAF to his large portfolio of mainly Contemporary events, such as the Affordable Art Fair, Pulse and Volta.

Among the changes he introduced were a new section focusing on Contemporary artists and – fittingly for a Scottish owner – a special exhibition on William Johnstone and work from the Royal Scottish Academy. A third special exhibition featured works by the Ingram Collection, which was reportedly seen shopping at the fair too.

Overall, Ramsay was pleased with the results and said there were more changes to come. “We can’t stagnate. We will continue to try to evolve and improve the fair from a visitor perspective.”

Dealers do not always embrace change. The reception of the more Contemporary bent did not receive universal acclaim from exhibitors.

But as founder and director Gay Hutson pointed out, recent works have been part of the fair’s make-up since its early days. She added that the Contemporary offerings were not the “decorative” Contemporary art that sometimes circulates on the market.

There is a demonstrable loyalty to the event. Despite changes and some time away, visitors were not put off, and numbers were said to be up on previous years.

Tania Sutton of Osborne Samuel said: “There were clients there that I’ve wanted to talk to for years and at one point all four of us working on the stand were talking to familiar clients. I really felt the fair got it right.” ■

5 Questions

David Hickmet of Hickmet Fine Art specialises in 19th and 20th century European sculpture and art glass.
hickmet.com

1 How did you get your start?

Representing the third generation of our family business you could say it has always been ‘in my blood’.

2 What events do you have coming up?

We exhibit on average once a month and our fairs include prestigious events (past and present) such as Olympia, NEC, Mayfair, Battersea, Petworth, BADA and LAPADA.

3 What is one great discovery you have made?

On a house call I discovered a collection of unopened Art Deco sculptures in original boxes that had been forgotten about at the bottom of a dusty cupboard.

4 What is one thing you would like to get your hands on – a ‘holy grail’?

Les Girls by Demetre Chiparus – a large iconic sculpture of five Ballets Russes dancers in a chorus line. This is without doubt the finest sculpture epitomising the Art Deco era. I would never sell it if I found one.

5 Who is someone you admire in or outside the trade?

Queen Elizabeth II.

Persian panel court in the action

Three large images of a mother and child are repeated against a ground of animals, pomegranate and cypress trees on this rare Safavid silk velvet panel.

It is one of the starring textiles at an exhibition titled Court Art of the Islamic and Indian World being held by Oliver Forge and Brendan Lynch at their Pall Mall, London, gallery until October 28.

The panel was made in Persia, 1600-25. Measuring 5ft 5in x 12in (1.65m x 31cm), it was sold with three others, all smaller, by Spink & Son in the 1980s, at which point they were said to have been found in Tibet. Since then it has been in a private collection. It is offered for £750,000.

Also on offer at the show, which coincides with Islamic Week, are examples of Indian metalwork, Safavid pottery and a group of Indian paintings and drawings.

Buy a spaniel from your armchair

An oil of a King Charles Spaniel by Hugh George Shaw (active 1880-95) is among the offerings in the latest edition of the Armchair Art Fair catalogue.

“A dog lover all my life, I have found it difficult to turn away some wonderful examples of both domestic and sporting canines,” writes John Noott, one of 12 ‘exhibitors’ in the fair.

He offers the picture, shown left, for £2850, and it is one of 10 examples of canine pictures to be found in his pages.

Part of a series that launched during lockdown, the catalogue features nearly 130 pages of artworks to choose from, and has proven to be a major seller for participating galleries. Kaye Michie, for example, sold 18 pictures from the last edition. Organised by John and Felicity Rae Smith, exhibitors include Haynes Fine Art, Karen Taylor Fine Art and The Hunt Gallery.

PDFs of the catalogue can be downloaded from the websites of most participating dealers.

Artist but not a money-maker

Frozen River South Esk, a 1910 oil by David Waterson is one of the offerings in Dominic Sanchez-Cabello’s exhibition Forgotten Masters, Enduring Images.

The picture, one of 12 in the show that will take place from November 2-6 in Harley Street, London, is available for £6000.

Like all the artists in the show, Waterson is a lesser-known talent of the past.

According to the dealer: “Artistic potential depends as much on business practice as it does on talent. Waterson’s mistrust of dealers and disdain for money saw that he sold his works from a folder behind the counter of his local stationers. He was notoriously difficult to ‘get a price out of’ and was famous for saying ‘get them to give me what they feel it is worth.’”

This is the first formal exhibition staged

Tantalising glimpses of a lost Carline work

by Laura Chesters

Two studies for a Richard Carline painting thought lost when the Tate was flooded in 1928 are appearing together at an exhibition close to the family's Hampstead home.

The whereabouts of the original c.1923-24 work known as Carline family in the kitchen at 47 Downshire Hill is not known but many believe it could have been one of the works lost or damaged in the infamous flood of the gallery (and much of the surrounding area) in January 1928.

The two sketches are owned separately. One remains with the Carline family. The other (pictured right) is to be offered via dealer Alden Bennett once the exhibition, Those Remarkable Carlines, concludes.

The show runs until April 10, 2023, at Burgh House, Hampstead, north London, and is one of three linked to Carline family displays at the historic home.

It is the first public showcase in over 40 years to focus on the Carlines, uniting works from public and private collections from across the country (many of which have not been seen in public for over 30 years).

Hampstead hub

Sydney (1888-1929), Hilda (1889-1950) and Richard Carline (1896-1980) were the children of artists Anne and George Carline.

Sydney and Richard both studied in Paris under the tutelage of the avant-garde teacher Percyval Tudor-Hart and Hilda joined them in 1915 when Tudor-Hart moved his Académie de Peinture to Hampstead. In 1918 the brothers became official First World War artists.

During the interwar years they were all based in Hampstead. Their family home at 47 Downshire Hill became a nexus for a glamorous artistic social group including painters Paul and John Nash, Stanley Spencer (who married Hilda), and writer Henry Lamb, who is known to have referred to them as 'Those Remarkable Carlines' – inspiring the show's title.

Among the other Richard Carline works on show are A Gathering on the Terrace at 47 Downshire Hill, 1924, on loan from Hull's Ferens Art Gallery which features Spencer (on the left) with the family.

Only a few of his works have sold at auction, with many in private hands or museums.

According to Art Price, his auction high was set in May 2020 at Swann Galleries in New York for Portrait of a Young Man (Self-Portrait) (1916) which made a hammer price of $10,000 (£8177).

Also at Burgh House is Shifting Memories by Hermione (daughter of Richard), which runs until November 6, and a single installation called Mantelpiece by Josie and Madeleine Hunter (daughters of Hermione), until April 10.

BRONZE OTTOMAN COHORN MORTAR

This important bronze cohorn mortar, made in the Ottoman Empire, owned by Sir Cecil Burney, Bt., has a fascinating history, as noted in the brass plate which reads 'Taken from the Citadel at Scutari by Naval Detachment of King Edward VII on the Occasion of the Occupation of Scutari by the Great Powers 25th May, 1913'.

The mortar, in pristine condition, weighs 184 lbs. The right trunnion is dated 1263 in Islamic script which is 1846 in the Gregorian calendar, and the chase carries the cypher of Sultan Abdul Mejid.

The bore is 5 1/4 in, the barrel is 16 1/4 in long, the bed is 33 in long, 16 1/2 in wide and 9 in high.

PRICE ON APPLICATION

Sir Cecil Burney, Bt.

At the handover of Scutari to Albania the King Edward VII was the flagship of Rear Admiral Sir Cecil Burney, Bt.

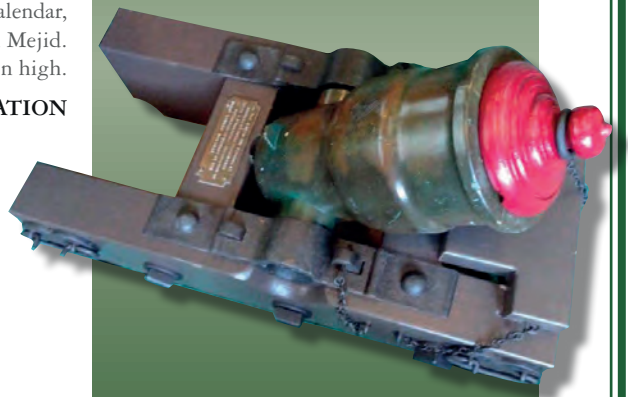

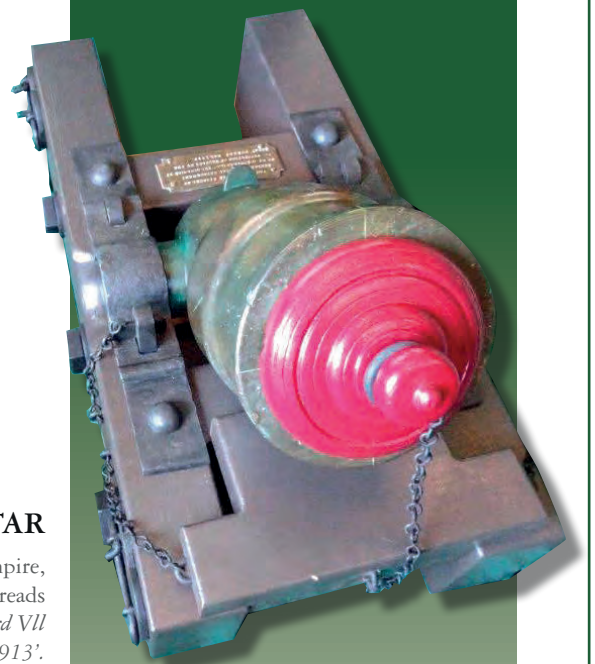

In 1913 when Montenegro seized control of Scutari during the closing stages of the First Balkan War, the London Conference decided that Scutari should be handed over to Albania. Burney was sent as temporary second-in-command of the Mediterranean Fleet, flying his flag in the cruiser HMS Dublin, to Antivari on the coast of Montenegro, to take command of the international naval force despatched to deal with this situation. For his successful handling of this he was appointed Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath (KCB) and later appointed Knight Commander of the Order of St Michael and St George (KCMG).

First World War

Burney returned to England and took command of the Second and Third Fleet, with his flag in the battleship HMS Queen in December 1913 and then in the battleship HMS Lord Nelson in July 1914. At the outbreak of the First World War these fleets were combined into the Channel Fleet with Burney in command. He ensured safe passage of the British Expeditionary Force to France. He commanded the squadron at the Battle of Jutland in May 1916, where his flagship HMS Marlborough was the first ship to engage the Germans but was later torpedoed, so his flag was transferred to the battleship HMS Revenge. Promoted full admiral in June 1916 he was appointed Knight Grand Cross of the Order of St Michael and St George (GCMG) in September 1916.

Post-war career

Burney became Commander-in-Chief, Portsmouth in March 1919. He became a Deputy Lieutenant of Southampton in May 1920. He was promoted Admiral of the Fleet in November 1920, created a baronet in 1921 New Year Honours, and appointed Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath (GCB) in the 1922 New Year Honours. He officially retired in November 1925, died at his home in Upham in Hampshire in June 1929 and is buried at Brookwood Cemetery.

Twenty years of tribal art

An Abelam hornbill sculpture from Papua New Guinea is among the highlights at the Tribal Art Fair in Amsterdam. It is offered for €1500 by local gallery Tribal Design, one of more than 20 exhibitors at the event.

This staging, which runs from October 28-30 (plus a preview on the 27th) at De Duif, marks the event's 20th anniversary. Although it launched as a small Dutch affair, it has grown to be international.

Several dealers come from the UK including Adam Prout and Bryan Reeves, while among the new participants are Ritual Curious Gallery from Barcelona and Zubek Gallery from Dusseldorf. Both specialise in objects from Africa.

A Dutch and English lecture programme includes a talk on the significance of the human skull in tribal art and issues surrounding it in collections.

News in brief

The Boston International Antiquarian Book Fair returns for its first in-person event since the start of the coronavirus pandemic. Taking place in downtown Boston from November 11-12, the 44th annual event hosts more than 100 dealers from nine countries.

Highlights at this edition include first editions of Jane Eyre and Finnegans Wake as well as collection of photographs by African-American photographer Dan Bolling of jazz musicians such as Miles Davis.

However, there is also a 'Discovery' section where items are priced at $100 or less.

Among the exhibitors are Maggs Bros, Mayfair Rare Books and Manuscripts and Sokol Books.

London antiques specialist Barakat has moved. It has not gone far, however, leaving 58 Brook Street, Mayfair, its home for nearly 20 years, for 31 Brook Street. The move was prompted by redevelopment of the former block, but the new space (right) is larger.

Ronati has published its guide to this year's autumn and winter fairs. The biannual production includes 87 fairs in the EU, UK and US. This edition covers more than 27 new events since the summer and spring edition. Ronati, which is a technology solutions company for the art and antiques trade, produces the guides in association with Antiques News and Fairs.

An exhibition on the relationship between southern US artist Dusti Bongé (1903-93) and gallerist and artist Betty Parsons (1900-82) has opened in New York City. Running until November 12, Kinship takes place at Hollis Taggart and comprises 35 works by Bongé and 15 by Parsons as well as photographs of the two women travelling.

Interior design specialist and dealer Jermaine Gallacher has teamed up with Cambridge auction house Cheffins to pick out his top choices from the 655 lots in its Art & Design Sale on October 27. The selection was then photographed at Gallacher's studio in Lant Street, Southwark, south London. Cheffins hopes to attract some of Gallacher's younger clients to the sale.

Dates for the next instalment of the London Art Fair have been set for January 18-23. This marks a return to its regular slot in the calendar after being rescheduled to April this year in light of continued uncertainty over coronavirus-related challenges. The event features more than 100 galleries from around the world as well as a series of specially curated spaces, events, tours and talks.

The second annual BADA Art Prize was awarded to Rosalie Oakman, a textile designer and artist. Presented at a champagne reception during BADA Week (October 3-9), the prize gives £1000 to an emerging artist whose works "exemplify the enduring ingenuity and quality" illustrated by BADA members' offerings.

Judges this year were artist Jenny Saville, Alain Dominique Perrin, the founder and president of the Cartier Foundation for Contemporary Art, Hrag Vartanian, editor-in-chief of online arts magazine Hyperallergic, and Dr Mark Westgarth, associate professor of art history and museum at the University of Leeds.

He worked with the gallery on the series of images which highlight select parts of specific objects, capturing "fingerprints in black glaze, the surface of marble that mimics skin perfectly, the other worldly iridescence found in a Roman cup".

“CHERISHED” A CATALOGED MARQUIS DOLL AUCTION Saturday and Sunday, November 12-13, 2022

At Theriault's Gallery in Annapolis, Maryland Preview 10AM • Auction 11AM EST Both Days

Featuring the important 50-year collection of Lila Rait of Victoria, Australia, author of the 1989 book Through the Nursery Window (Oxford University Press, 1989). In her foreword to that book, Constance Eileen King notes that Lila writes “of a country and pattern of childhood that was completely divorced from that of Europe, a pattern that forced the Australian child into a greater perception of the wonder of a single toy...[yet] Lila Rait tells too of the boom years in the 19th century when, glutted with vast wealth, parents travelled widely and purchased very expensive dolls in the capital of Europe”.

It is this collection, notable not only for the wonderful dolls, but also for the provenance which accompanies many of the dolls, which make this two-day auction an event of delight. Two days of live auctions in the gallery, as well as live video/audio presentation of the entire auctions.

The 224-page full-color catalog with detailed descriptions of each lot can be ordered for $69. For more information or to order the catalog visit www.theriaults.com or call +001-410-224-3655.

Regular Lake Como villa visits left Hockney full of beans

Watercolour given as thanks to his Heinz family host in 2003 now sells to a US collector

by Jonathan Franks

£1 = €1.15

In the early 2000s David Hockney (b.1937) was a regular visitor to the Villa Maresi on Lake Como.

It was one of the homes belonging to Drue Heinz, widow of Henry John Heinz II, president of the omnipresent food company, who died in 2018 at the age of 103. She was known as a philanthropist and passionate patron of the arts.

She regularly welcomed artists and celebrities to her Italian villa and as a token of gratitude Hockney not only drew several portraits of his hostess (two of them now in the National Portrait Gallery) but he also presented her with several watercolours with views from the Villa Maresi.

One of them, the 12 x 16in (31 x 41cm) watercolour sketch On Lake Como, found its way to Geble (20% buyer's premium) in Radolfzell for the sale on October 8.

It was dated Sept. 03, bore Hockney's initials and his handwritten dedication to Heinz. At some time, she gave the watercolour to her driver and caretaker at the villa; it later came into the possession of a German collector.

On auction day it was knocked down to a US Hockney collector for the guide of €120,000 (£104,350). ■

Marcks hoped for better

The creative roots of this 22in (56cm) bronze figure, which was one of the highlights at Nusser (22.69% buyer's premium) in Munich on September 20, date back to the pre-war years.

From 1930-37 the German sculptor Gerhard Marcks (1889-1981) created a number of bronzes depicting young women, either seated or squatting.

After he was classed as a degenerate artist by the Nazis who confiscated many of his works and prevented him from exhibiting, his artistic output was understandably much reduced.

He continued to produce graphic art and in 1945 he executed a woodcut of a seated woman that he entitled Die Hoffnung (Hope). This motif was executed as a bronze in 1950, now called Soldanelle, which – like almost all of Marcks' works – was cast by the foundry Barth in Rinteln.

The figure in Munich, which was numbered VII, attracted bids from several collectors on the phone, who pushed the price from €10,000 to €16,000 (£13,915).

Bloody good or bloody bad

The Austrian artist and composer Hermann Nitsch, who died earlier this year at the age of 84, had as many detractors as followers.

His art and dramatic performances which he described as mystery orgy theatre were often the cause of controversy. He often combined religious motifs with ritualised violence, sometimes incorporating animal blood in considerable quantities, managing to offend the sensibilities of the Catholic church, animal rights activists and many more besides.

Nevertheless, Nitsch exhibited at major museums around the world and produced operas at some of the world's most renowned houses. His works were also present at British and European auctions and – very rarely – at sales in New York and Hong Kong.

Performance art

The sale held by Ressler (21% buyer's premium) on September 26 in Vienna showed that he still also has a strong market in his home country.

Two paintings were particularly sought after: the first was a 2ft 11in x 3ft 3in (90cm x 1m) canvas, which was created with oil paint and blood during a performance on March 15,

Image: Klaus-Dieter Meiser

1987. It brought €32,000 (£27,825), almost double the estimate.

There was even more interest for a so-called Schüttbild (poured painting) from the previous year. For this 3ft 5in x 2ft 5in (1.05m x 80cm) canvas Nitsch just used oil and finger-painting.

This was more to the bidders' taste: the price rose from €15,000 to €55,000 (£47,825).

Series idea born after a friend's pregnancy

Since 1969, when it was sold at a gallery exhibition in Munich, one of Niki de Saint Phalle's (1930-2002) well-known Nanas had belonged to a south German collector. They consigned to Neumeister (30% buyer's premium) in Munich for the sale on September 28-29.

The 7in (17cm) high painted figure was titled Nana Pregnant (Last Night I had a dream).

In the mid-1960s, Saint Phalle had created the first of her Nanas which were inspired by a friend's pregnancy and were to become a fundamental part of her oeuvre.

The figure offered in Munich was closely connected to an 18-part relief that the artist had presented at a Parisian gallery in 1968 under the name Last Night I had a Dream.

The reliefs included her Nanas, several of her favourite animals and other symbols connected to her life and loves.

Many of these motifs figured prominently throughout her career; some as painted polyester models of differing sizes, others in drawings and screen-prints.

In contrast to the polyester figures shown in Paris, the auction piece was made of plaster. This, and the fact that it was fresh to the market, go some way to explain the international interest.

The winning bid from a French collector who outpaced his competitors was €46,000 (£40,000), over seven times the lower estimate.

Rage against the perfect machine

The complex and sometimes bizarre machines that the Swiss artist Jean Tinguely (1925-91) constructed during his long career belong to the most distinctive examples of kinetic art.

His works, which he called Métamatics, are purposely imperfect while still functioning. The fundamental principle of all of Tinguely's sculptures is movement. As the artist put it in a manifesto, published in 1959, "everything moves, there is no such thing as standing still".

They are his ironic statement on the attempt by engineers and mechanics to create perfect machines.

Many of his constructions are monumental, suitable only for open spaces or museums with adequate space. He did also create more manageable pieces for collectors, such as the machine-sculpture Für Niels (For Niels) which is coming up for sale at Lehr in Berlin on October 29.

Like his larger constructions, it is a welded conglomeration of steel, iron and wire, powered by an electric motor and was made in 1980. It was consigned by a collector from Hesse and, as the catalogue notes, is in good working order, there are, however, some oil stains on the base.

Estimate €30,000.

Check out Whitney's spontaneous design

According to Munich saleroom Ketterer, the 3ft 4in (1.02m) square painting N. O. 9th. Ward, which is part of the sale on December 9, is the first work by the American artist Stanley Whitney (b.1946) ever to be offered at a German auction.

Since the 1970s, Whitney's oeuvre has been dominated by compositions with grids of brightly coloured rectangles. He was influenced not only by the works of Josef Albers but also by the study of historic architecture and building methods.

In spite of their regular form, his works are spontaneous, as he said in an interview in 2017: "When I start these paintings, I have no idea what it's going to be. I don't start with a sketch or an idea."

In recent years, Whitney has been honoured at renowned international exhibitions and has recently commanded six- and seven-figure prices on both sides of the Atlantic.

Ketterer is hoping to benefit from this upsurge in demand. This painting, which was sold by a Viennese gallery in 2007, the year of its inception, to a Bavarian collector, is now expected to bring €150,000-250,000.

Take a seat

The central motif of Antoni Tàpies' (1923-2012) Personnage assis (Variation XI), a mixed-media work from 1984, has been the subject of many discussions among art historians.

The seated figure, the outlines of which seem to glow golden against the black background, has been interpreted as not only a human figure but also as a cross.

It belongs to a period during which the artist concerned himself with many forms of spirituality. The single visible foot reflects many of his works which often contain symbolised body parts: feet, hands or eyes. Tàpies said these were inspired by votive offerings brought to church by the faithful, to assist in healing affliction.

The painting, incorporating brush and India ink, chalk, wax and gouache on wove paper, laid down on a 3ft 5in x 2ft 6in (1.05m x 76cm) canvas, is coming up for sale at Van Ham in Cologne on November 30 with a guide of €40,000-60,000. The artist recreated Personnage assis as the last sheet of a suite of 11 lithographs, all the same size as the painting, which he published as Variations in 1984 in an edition of 90.

Vietnamese artists make their mark at French auction houses

The growing interest in inter- and post-war works by Vietnamese artists – particularly those alumni of the Ecole des Beaux Arts d’Indo-Chine – means that France, as a former colonial power in the region, is well supplied with examples.

These regularly surface at auction, increasingly in dedicated sales.

Aguttes (25/23% buyer’s premium), one of the firms that has pioneered sales in this genre, offered its 35th catalogue on October 3 featuring works by high-profile artists such as Le Pho (1907-2001), Vu-Cao

£1 = €1.14 Dam (1908-2000) and Le Quoc Loc (1918-87).

Mai Trung Thu’s (1906-80) Jeunes filles aux cousins, from 1961, was one of the day’s top-sellers at a double-estimate €280,000 (£245,615).

The painting, in ink and colours on silk, depicts one girl holding a fan, another a letter and the third a flower and had been in the same Parisian collection since it was acquired in the 1960s.

Contained in the original frame made by the artist, the 7½in x 2ft 11in (19.5 x 89.5cm) work is signed and dated upper left and monogrammed, titled and dated on the reverse.

Carnations display

Five days later in Bordeaux in a sale of Old Master and Modern paintings and works of art held by Briscadieu (20.83% buyer’s premium), a picture by Le Pho proved to be the sale highlight.

Femme aux oeillets, painted in gouache on silk applied to card, sold for €440,000 (£385,965), five times the estimate. Depicting a woman with a pot of carnations holding a spray of the flowers in one hand, it was unpublished and had been in the same family since it was purchased in Casablanca in 1942.

The 2ft 1in x 17¾in (64 x 45cm) work is signed in Latin letters and Chinese characters and has the artist’s stamp upper right and is titled on the reverse.

Soulages from 1981

Among the potential highlights in Aguttes’ Contemporary Art auction in Neuilly on November 2 will be this 3ft 3in x 2ft 8in (1m x 81cm) oil on canvas by Pierre Soulages (b.1919), 30 mai 1981, which is signed, dated and titled on the reverse.

The published and exhibited work, which comes from a private Paris collection, has an estimate of €600,000-1m.

Keep an eye out for Sanyu paintings

On November 23 in its sale of Modern and Contemporary Art, auction firm Art Research Paris will be offering two paintings by the Paris school Chinese-French artist Sanyu (1895-1966).

Both works were given by the artist to Franck Willmann, who studied art at the l’Académie libre de la Grande Chaumière until 1946, where Sanyu was also a student.

They have passed down by descent to the vendor. Shown above left, Portrait de jeune femme à l’oeil unique, depicts a young woman with a single eye, is painted on hardboard, measures 10in (25cm) square, is signed in Chinese and French lower right and has the manuscript inscription Paris 1946 to the reverse.

The second work, above right, is a 10 x 11½in (25 x 29cm) oil on masonite portrait of a woman in profile, signed in French and Chinese upper right and inscribed Paris 1945 to the reverse.

Each painting has an estimate of €15,000-20,000. arp-auction.com

Sale celebrates Cocteau and his artist friends

A third sale featuring ceramics by Jean Cocteau took place in Bonhams Cornette de Saint Cyr's (27.5%/26/20/14.5% buyer's premium) Paris saleroom on September 29.

This particular event, titled Jean Cocteau et l'Atelier Madeleine-Jolly, une amitié sans faille, celebrated the friendship and working partnership between the poet, artist and author Cocteau and the artists Marie Madeleine-Jolly and Philippe Madeline who had a pottery workshop in Villefranche-sur-Mer in the south of France.

Creative collaboration

After an intense period of directing films, Cocteau had spent much of the 1950s focused on visual arts.

He found that painting provided relief from depression, and in 1957, he embarked on a new creative collaboration with two ceramicists. At the age of 68, he happily became the 'apprentice' to Marie and Philippe, working in their studio in Villefranche-sur-Mer until his death in 1963. Together they created a unique process to transform Cocteau's drawings into ceramics, producing over 300 designs.

All the examples offered by Bonhams were original editions created at the pottery during Cocteau's lifetime (some accompanied by the corresponding design drawing), between 1957 and 1963. This collection being sold by the Madeline-Jolly family, all fresh to the market, was the largest group of Cocteau ceramics to be offered at auction.

The sale raised a premium-inclusive total of €470,475 with an 85% take-up by lot.

Among the best-sellers, at a double-estimate hammer price of €12,000 (£10,525), was this plate titled Chèvre-pieds jumeaux (left).

The 14in (36cm) diameter part glazed terracotta and engobe plate, which is signed Jean Cocteau and inscribed original to the reverse, is the original model from 1962 created by him for the subsequent edition of 35.

The original and authoritative sales listing

This is a calendar of art, antiques and general auctions to be held as live sales in the UK and Ireland over the next three weeks. It also includes timed online auctions running on thesaleroom.com.

Every effort is made to ensure information is accurate at the time of going to press (typically Friday 2pm before the week of publication). Readers are reminded to check with the auction house directly to (i) understand the conditions under which the auction is taking place and (ii) to avoid disappointment in case of late changes, errors or omissions.

Our online calendar is updated throughout the week, check it regularly for the latest information.

Auctioneers are requested to contact us with details of their sales and inform us of any changes.

Timed auctions on thesaleroom.com: bidding made easy

In a timed auction, there is no auctioneer taking bids from a live audience in a room. Instead, all the bidding takes place online.

Timed auctions have an end-time displayed on the lot page. You can bid at any point from when the auction opens to when it closes.

As a bidder, you can enter a max bid – the most you are willing to bid, using our set bidding increments and we do the rest. We will bid intelligently for you, bidding only enough for you to meet the reserve or stay in the lead.

Your max bid stays secret in our system. We won't share your maximum bid with the auctioneer, the seller or other bidders.

You'll see your 'current bid' when you log in and view the lot. If someone bids higher than your maximum, we will send you an 'outbid alert' via email, so you can decide whether to bid more.

If a bid is placed in the final few minutes before the auction closes for that lot, the time period will be extended by a number of minutes. The auction house can set the number of minutes, usually 10.

This is to stop 'sniping' – a practice used by bidders on some other websites whereby they rush to place bids in the last few seconds to prevent other bidders being able to respond before the auction closes.

Artist's Resale Right

Advertisements in Antiques Trade Gazette may mention Artist's Resale Right (ARR). Here is how it is applied'

Living artists and the descendants of artists deceased within the last 70 years are entitled to receive a resale royalty each time their work is bought. The right applies only when the sale price reaches or exceeds the sterling equivalent of €1,000 and is calculated on a sliding scale.

Please note ARR is calculated in euros.

Auctioneers will apply current exchange rates.

Royalty	Resale price up to €50,000
4%
3%	between €50,000.01 and €200,000
1%	between €200,000.01 and €350,000
0.5%	between €350,000.01 and €500,000
0.25%	in excess of €500,000

Royalties are also capped so that the total amount of the royalty paid for any single sale of a work cannot exceed €12,500. ARR is exempt of VAT.

Glossary

If you are new to the art market you may find this list of terms frequently used in Antiques Trade Gazette helpful.

A longer list of art market terms appears at [antiquetrade gazette.com/glossary](http://antiquetrade gazette.com/glossary)

After

When a work of art or an object is described as 'after' a known artist or maker, this means it was created as a copy by an unidentified artist of a named work by a known artist.

Artist's Resale Right

Living artists and the descendants of artists deceased within the last 70 years are entitled to receive a resale royalty each time their work is sold. The charge applies to the sale of original works of art made via transactions conducted by both dealers and auctioneers.

ATG

Antiques Trade Gazette, the weekly newspaper and associated website.

BADA

The British Antique Dealers' Association (BADA) is a trade association founded in 1918.

Buyer's premium

A charge made by the auctioneer to the buyer as a percentage of the hammer price. This fee is usually subject to VAT.

CITES

The United Nations Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna (CITES) controls the trade in endangered species. Its regulations cover 'parts and derivatives' of endangered species as well as live specimens and encompass a range of materials found in antiques and taxidermy such as ivory, tortoiseshell, and furniture fashioned from some tropical hardwood.

Consign

When a vendor agrees to sell a work via an auction house, they are said to have 'consigned' a work for sale. Also see 'Vendor' below.

Contemporary

A contemporary artwork is an object or picture made by a living artist. However, an auction titled as 'Contemporary art' will often also feature works by artists working in the second half of the 20th century but now deceased.

Decorative art

This term refers to three-dimensional antiques including ceramics, glass, silver and furniture, that serve a decorative as well as functional purpose. In this way, it is different to 'Fine art' and 'Works of art'.

Estimate

The price or price range displayed alongside the catalogue description of an item in an auction, indicating the value at which the auctioneer believes the lot might sell. In ATG we often use 'guide', 'expectations' or 'hopes of' to mean 'estimate'.

Fine art

The term 'Fine art' refers to visual art produced primarily for aesthetic purposes. It generally comprises paintings, watercolours, drawings, photography and sculpture.

However, many auction houses describe some of their sales as 'Fine Art Auctions' simply to distinguish them from 'General sales' to imply the lots on offer are of higher value.

Fresh to market

An item that comes to sale having not been offered recently at all is said to be 'fresh to the market'. Such objects are sometimes referred to as 'unseen', meaning that potential buyers are unlikely to be familiar with them, and they tend to have greater appeal due to their 'freshness'.

General sales

A general sale is an auction usually offering lower-value lots – often from house clearances – and held weekly.

Hammer price

The price at which a lot is knocked down at an auction. The auction house will then add buyer's premium and other charges on top of this amount.

IACF

International Antiques and Collectors Fairs is the company that organises large fairs that take place regularly at Newark, Shepton Mallet, Ardingly, Newbury and Alexandra Palace.

International

In ATG 'international' refers to markets outside the UK and Ireland.

Knocked down

In ATG, we often say a lot was 'knocked down' at a certain price. This represents the level to which the lot was bid when the auctioneer knocked down their gavel (i.e. the hammer price – see above).

LAPADA

A trade association for UK antiques dealers formed in 1974. It was previously called the London and Provincial Antique Dealers Association and now it retains the LAPADA acronym as its title.

Mid-century

A term referring to objects made in the middle part of the 20th century, particularly 1950-70.

Modern

The modern art market comprises objects and pictures that stylistically represent a departure from traditional conventions regarding form and academic approach. It generally covers 20th century works that contrast with Old Masters and Victorian paintings, for example.

NAVA

The National Association of Valuers and Auctioneers is a professional self-regulating trade association for valuers and auctioneers across property, fine art and chattels.

Premium-inclusive price

The hammer price plus the buyer's premium due on an item sold at auction. This figure does not include VAT or other buyer's fees added by the saleroom.

Private buyer

Bidders at auction and collectors who are not dealers or 'trade' buyers are referred to as private buyers.

Private sale

A private transaction brokered by an auctioneer between two (often undisclosed) parties. This type of sale contrasts with a public auction where bidding can be viewed and prices are available.

Provincial/regional

'Provincial' auctions or the 'regional' market refer to sales taking place in locations around the UK as opposed to at the major London auction houses of Christie's, Sotheby's, Phillips and Bonhams. When ATG uses these terms, we generally include sales in Edinburgh and the mid-market salerooms in London.

Provenance

This term refers to the history of ownership of an object. An item with a long and documented history to a prestigious family or well-known collector, for example, would be said to have good provenance and therefore be more desirable.

Regional

Reserve

The price agreed between the vendor and auctioneer, below which the auctioneer will not sell the lot. Some vendors agree to sell at 'the auctioneer's discretion' – for example when it is difficult to set a reserve due to the type of lot being sold.

Saleroom

The room where an auction takes place is referred to as 'the saleroom'. The phrase can also be used as a general term for auctions, for example: "The painting was making its third saleroom appearance in three years."

Selling rate

The percentage of lots in an auction that sold on the day or days when the auction was held. This figure usually provides a good indication of the market's reaction to the items in the sale, although sometimes where reserves are set at low levels (as the vendor is keen to sell the items, for example) this might not be the case.

Single-owner sale

A single-owner sale refers to an auction that comprises solely items from one source. It is often a prominent collection which is deemed significant enough to form a separate event with its own catalogue. Examples have included Christie's sale of the Yves Saint Laurent collection in Paris in 2009 and the auction of the collection of David and Peggy Rockefeller in New York in 2018.

Sleeper

A sleeper is an object that is undervalued at the time it is offered for sale. Experts that are on the look-out for sleepers at auction are sometimes called sleeper spotters. While some sleepers pass through auctions unnoticed, others are spotted by two or more parties and may make a spectacular price over estimate.

SoFAA

The Society of Fine Art Auctioneers and Valuers (SoFAA) was formed in 1973 to represent fine art and antiques auctioneers and valuers in the UK.

Stall out

This term refers to dealers taking a stand and setting up at a fair.

TEFAF

TEFAF stands for 'The European Fine Art Fair'. It is an organisation that runs some of the world's leading art and antiques fairs: TEFAF Maastricht, which takes place annually in March, and TEFAF New York, held twice a year, in the autumn and spring.

thesaleroom.com

The website thesaleroom.com is an online global auction platform which allows visitors to search and browse auction catalogues and place bids over the internet in real time. It is wholly owned by Auction Technology Group, the parent company of Antiques Trade Gazette, and provides some of the data used in ATG each week.

The trade

Dealers. An object sold at auction to 'the trade' is one that was purchased by a dealer.

Vendor

The seller who consigns an object or collection to an auction or dealer.

Verso/recto

Terms referring to different sides of a picture. Verso refers to the back, while recto refers to the front. For books, the right-hand page of an open book is called the recto, while the left-hand side is known as the verso.

Vetting

The process that takes place at a fair to ensure items offered are suitable for the event. This usually relates to the checking of items to make sure they are properly attributed, described and dated. Some fairs also apply a dateline, meaning that objects are vetted to ensure they are of the requisite age to be exhibited.

Vintage

A term referring to both objects and fashion to describe the style or quality of the item. A piece of vintage fashion is likely to have been made by a designer at least 20 years ago, while a 'vintage' piece of Lalique glassware or Gillows furniture implies it is a high-quality or rare item in the maker's trademark style.

In the car market, a vintage car refers to a model no longer in production, typically made between the First World War and Second World War.

With wine, 'vintage' applies to grapes grown and harvested in a single specified year.

White glove sale

An auction in which all of the lots are sold (i.e. a 100% selling rate) is called a 'white glove' sale.

Works of art

In the art and antiques market, a 'work of art' is a specific category comprising small, three-dimensional objects which have artistic quality. They are different from fine art and decorative art (see above). Small sculptures, Art Deco figures, wall plaques and enamel objects are examples of 'works of art'.

Shepton Mallet put in the picture

The three-day fair welcomed renowned photojournalist for a swish magazine showcase

by Joan Porter

IACF Shepton Mallet is in vogue... and also in Vogue US magazine.

The fair will feature in November's issue after the high fashion/lifestyle magazine had a photoshoot with renowned photojournalist Martin Parr during the three-day antiques and collectors' fair at the Bath & West Showground in September.

Parr, who is also a collector of pop culture photographs and postcards, said: "We decided to come to the Shepton Mallet fair as we knew there were lots of stands but were overwhelmed by how many stallholders there actually are."

"This gave us the opportunity to select the props we wanted to use with our accessories to make some really interesting pictures."

Next staging

The organisers' next outing at the showground is on Friday to Sunday, November 11-13, with a regular 600-dealer count including local exhibitors from the south-west plus stallholders such as art dealer Richard Laker from YouNeedArt, based in London and the Home Counties, who stood at the fair for the first time in September.

He said: "I absolutely loved it. You see the type of people who seriously come in to buy a lot."

"It was a lot of fun."

Antique and vintage textiles are always a hit at this fair and dealers in November include Liz van Hasselt, Frock & Fripperies and Linda Campbell Down. Van Hasselt said: "We've been trading at this fair for many years and always have a good selection of textiles, trimmings and other treasures from France." ■

Large family tables fit festive demand

Samantha and Richard Payne-Withers run two antiques centres in Bridport, a busy Dorset market town which offers quite a choice of antiques and vintage shops.

Bridport Antiques features more traditional pieces including fine art and furniture ("the higher end," says Richard) from the 20 or so dealers there, while The Alleyways Antiques Centre based in the art and vintage quarter in the town has 50 dealers and a waiting list.

Richard adds: "The lower and higher ends are doing well, it's the mid-range that's suffering, price-wise."

Furniture is certainly walking out of the door at Bridport Antiques. "Art does well here and we're selling plenty of chests of drawers, desks and bureaux and, looking ahead to Christmas, large family tables," he says.

The shop currently has an Edwardian oak extending dining table on carved legs with four extra leaves to seat up to 14 diners priced at £2750.

The centre benefits, as with many others, from cash-rich buyers who have sold up in London and other cities and moved to the peace of small country town living.

Vintage market

For many years the couple ran the monthly vintage market on St Michael's Trading Estate in Bridport, giving it up in March. That event is now organised by four traders on the estate including Tina Keating. The next is on Sunday October 30, the last until next year. Keating says: "This is an outdoor market and we usually have between 30 and 40 traders every month in the busy quarter."

Cross referenced

Lucy Burnett is a dealer at Market Cross Antiques in the Somerset town of Somerton, near Yeovil.

Her stock includes furniture, mirrors and lighting as well as ceramics.

The centre itself, which has been open for 10 years and is now owned by Peter George, offers around 25 dealers including an upstairs art gallery and has "a couple of cabinets to rent in the centre," said Burnett.

Brassware, glass and a large selection of chairs are among the attractions here.

Obituary – Roger Clarke (April 1, 1942–October 16, 2022)

We are very sorry to inform that Roger Clarke passed away on Sunday, October 16, after a short illness in Mallorca.

Roger who operated La Chaise Antique specialising in upholstery and leatherwork, was known to dealers and the fair circuit over many years.

He was definitely a 'Marmite' character, but whatever you think, he was gregarious, stylish, a larger than life character, unbelievably entertaining socially, and I am sure he wouldn't object to be described as a compulsive womaniser!

His love of the finer things in life involved Porsches, London clubs, skiing at Cloisters and his stylish girlfriends.

'Roger the Dodger' was the ultimate dealer/hustler who never gave up on a deal until he had the better end of it – one of the best salesmen this job has ever seen.

He ran La Chaise Antique from Faringdon, Oxfordshire, for many years before moving to Stow-on-the-Wold for the last 20 years where he retained a small shop and bolt hole.

He had spent recent years at his second home in Mallorca, which he considered home for the latter years of his life.

He will be sadly missed.

From Gary Wright

Zoffany was identified in a private collection

I was pleased to see Zoffany's portrait of Mr Townsend featuring on the front page of ATG (No 2563).

I would just like to mention that although Mary Webster did not know of the picture and assumed it was missing, I identified the subject of the painting when I saw it some 10 years ago in a private collection, and published it in the catalogue of the Zoffany exhibition held at the Royal Academy in 2012 (pp 44-45, fig 38) – as noted in the Duke's sale catalogue.

Obituary – Nina Zborowska

My friend Nina Zborowska, who has died aged 77, was an art dealer, avid collector and enthusiast whose sense of style permeated her life and work.

Nina trained at Manchester College of Art in tailoring and fashion design in the mid-1960s. She painted for a while but soon became interested in the 'family business', running a gallery. Her great uncle Leopold Zborowski was the patron of Modigliani.

A regular exhibitor at many of the London fairs including BADA, World of Watercolours and the 20/21 British Art Fair, she also held exhibitions at her family home near Painswick in the Cotswolds. At the start of her business she worked with a number of Cornish artists who were then less well known: Adrian Ryan, Max Barrett, Gill Watkiss, Daphne McClure and Sven Berlin.

As her passion for displaying and living with art developed she was drawn closer to the Bloomsbury Group and their work at Charleston. She also promoted individual artists such as Dod Proctor, Mary Fedden, Keith Vaughan and Bernard Meninsky. At the time these artists were really not well known.

Nina was the soul of discretion but she loved to share her passion for art by organising trips for NADFAS (now The Arts Society) to her favourite galleries and gardens.

A service was held at home for friends and family, a quiet and intimate ceremony. Nina is survived by her husband Brian and their son Peter. She will be missed by all those who had the good fortune to know her.

The auctioneer's tale: moving from cattle to chattel

At ATG we always enjoy hearing about younger members of the trade making progress in their careers.

A few weeks ago Toby Cleave, 24, contacted us after making his rostrum debut at west Midlands auction house Warwick & Warwick assisting with its Philatelic sale.

He says: "This was a career defining moment as I crossed the threshold from the agricultural to the collectable."

Having started auctioneering at the age of 19 in livestock, his first auction was at Bagshaws' Darley Moor Collective Sale and he later worked for Kivells in Devon in its dairy department.

"Having grown up on the family dairy farm, auctions have been a mainstay and a passion throughout my life," he says. "Whether it be buying or selling cattle at a young age or attending Harper Adams University with a view to becoming an auctioneer.

"Many hours were spent watching, listening and emulating those on the rostrum, practising my chant wherever I could – much to the annoyance of some of my friends."

Cleave joined Warwick & Warwick in July for "more experience on the rostrum and selling a different type of merchandise". He says: "It's good to make a change sometimes.

The work and office environment is also a lot cleaner than the market!"

Different approach

But switching from the hustle and bustle of outside livestock marts to the more refined art and antiques saleroom is something Cleave is still adjusting to.

He explains: "While it was mentioned to me in the days leading up to the sale that stylistically antiques and collectables auctions sound very different from the cattle rings or sale fields I previously cut my teeth on, I was confident in my ability as I took gavel in hand.

"The crowd was a little more sparse than I was used to, the bustling ringside replaced by the clerk, a telephone bidder and a camera livestreaming to the world.

"So off I went rattling through the 80 lots in just under an hour, I slipped back into the old routine with phrasings and quips picked up over my years on the sheep pens and machinery fields."

So how did his new colleagues react?

"The clerk was smiling throughout and the secretary on the phones struggled to hold it together at times on the verge of laughter and I felt quite pleased with my work. But there were two common themes in the feedback I was given following the sale: too fast and too loud and one client even queried whether we were selling stamps or cows!"

Cleave is now taking on the comments and working on his patter. "What I had not considered was the time bidders may take to look at the images or the catalogue during the sale, the softer tone that allows them to think with better clarity," he says. "A bustling livestock market needs to be loud so it holds your attention with many attendees treating it as much as a social gathering than a place of business.

"So the lack of crowd when selling to the internet especially means that those aspects are not required and while a routine is necessary in order to conduct the sale, the software allows bidders to see what the current and asking bids are at any time.

"I'm happy to report that after some tweaks were made the feedback has been much more positive following the latest Collectables sale and I am looking forward to continuing my career in the antiques and collectables auction sector."

What is Cleave's highlight so far since making the switch?

"The varied nature of the firm's sales means that there's always something interesting being sold," he says. "The model railway auctions are entertaining but in terms of notable items the Mauritius Stamp collection that sold for £8000 (£2000 above estimate) in the October Philatelic Auction is my biggest highlight so far."

We wish Toby every success with his art and antiques career.
